Most students at South survive the humps and bumps of their junior high years. Dances, football games, noon hours, and Friday afternoons made the 1976-77 year at South "coast by" while homework, classes, report cards, and Monday mornings made the year seem endless. Each day may have seemed long, but as we look back at the school year, we find that there were special moments from September to June that made the year stand out from any other year.

Languages, Math, And English Keep Students Busy

This year in our Math Department seventh and eighth grades learned the basic principles. Multiplication, division, addition, and subtraction were the main achievements of the students. The ninth grade began working with algebra as introductory and algebra classes got under way. Other students strived for perfection in general math.

This year English classes were kept busy with grammar and literature. The reading of TREASURE ISLAND, DURANGO STREET, THE CONTENDER, DAVID COPPERFIELD, and other novels kept the students interested throughout the year. Other assignments featured parts of speech and the study of mythology.

French and Spanish got the year off to a good start in the foreign language department. Mr. Carl Jacobson, French teacher, and Mr. Ronald Greiner, Spanish teacher, kept busy throughout the year with students in grades seven through nine.

Students Explore The Arts

Our Fine Arts Department provides a variety of activity such as arts, crafts, speech, and instrumental music. Typing and careers help give our students a look into the future along with training for the job world. Our art students were a great help in giving the school some color in the halls from their posters and banners. We had a new addition in the area of vocal music which was the guitar class. The drama students were very busy this year. They put on the play along with the Children's Theater for the elementary students.

Science And Social Studies Reveal Interesting Facts

Science is a required subject for both seventh and ninth graders. The seventh graders' science classes are based on earth-science, which covered geography. The ninth grade classes studied biology and started the year with the metric system. Various chemical experiments were used to achieve an understanding of science.

This year the social studies classes started the semester with the Presidential Election. The seventh and eighth graders take the required social studies classes, while ninth graders have civics, in which government is studied. Books, films and filmstrips, and discussions were a major part of these classes. Fun was included by the making of collages, posters, and bulletin boards.

Vocational Arts: A Learning Experience

This past year many students have worked hard in all vocational classes. These classes prove profitable in two ways. They provide students with valuable skills and many attractive and interesting projects were made. These classes also give variety to students' schedules while allowing them to improve their talents.

Fitness Important To Students

Physical fitness classes taught students different sports and the fun it can be to participate. The boys also learned to use the weight machine.

In health, students learned skills which will help them in the future.

Intramural games at noon hour brought out the competition in everyone.

Choirs Add A Melody

Music has always been popular at South School. This year's choirs and Madrigals have been busy keeping up their reputation. While both choirs and Madrigals have been busy singing, the Madrigals gave small concerts at elderly homes. Those concerts were enjoyed very much. During the Christmas season the vocal music students, under the direction of Miss Mary Ellen Gase, gave a well received concert. They also helped South students get in the Christmas spirit by caroling in the halls. The guitar choir was a new addition this year. At the Christmas Concert they sang, while playing chords on their guitars. This is a welcome addition to South School. In the upcoming years, we hope that South's music program will continue to grow and fill South with music.

Instrumentalists Strive For Excellence

In the past, our South School students in bands and orchestra have always done well in their performances, and are still going strong this year. They have shown perfection and beauty in all of their work. Their directors are Dr. Lloyd Jensen, band instructor, and Mr. Dave Austin, orchestra instructor. The bands and orchestra participated in contests and various concerts in our area.

Journalism Staff Has Fun While Working Hard

The 1976-77 journalism staff, under the supervision of Mrs. Helen Sparks, worked very hard this year, which is a policy that all of the staffs follow. They also find the time to have fun while getting the job done. Among the responsibilities of the staff are the REBEL REVIEW, our school newspaper, the SOUTHERN GRAFFITI, the annual magazine using the artwork and poetry of students, and the SIS BOOM, our yearbook. Without the help of Mr. Robert Carlyon and his printing classes, a lot of the work by the staff would never get to be printed. During the year the staff members become very close and room 118 becomes their "second home."

South's girl's volleyball team tied for first place in the junior high league. They started the season off with a total of seven straight wins. They lost the next two games which were against Eddy and Central. They finished the season off with a win over Webber. This proved to be their best game of the year.

Rebel Runners Put Forth Much Effort

A good turnout and high spirits sparked last year's South boys' track team to a fine showing in each meet. Outstanding runners were Phil Chernich with a high of 24 1/2 points and Bob Hoffman close behind with 16 points. Although no track meets were won, new challenges were met and conquered. The boys showed a lot of pride in their team and proved that they were truly winners in sportsmanship and team fight. The mile relay team of Phil Chernich, Tom Hunt, Bob Hoffman and Brian Beins placed a close second in the city meet.

Cold Weather, Carter Make 1977 Stand Out

Cold winter weather, the new Carter administration and Fonzie were just a few of the many things that made the year 1977 unforgettable. Temperatures this winter were down below zero much of the time. Many people listened to President Jimmy Carter when he told Americans about the gas shortage, and thermostats were reduced to 68 degrees during the day. Some even went so far as to turn them down to 55 degrees at night. Cardigan sweaters, as seen on President Carter in his first "fireside chat," have been worn more often. Also in style this year were Fonzie t-shirts, gauchos, leather boots, and cowl neck sweaters which kept us all warm this winter.

To Julie Wing for her fine artwork which appears on the cover; Mary Holme-Shaw for her artwork within the book; Miss Brown's art classes for their help with posters; Mr. Carlyon for his help with photography; Principal Ekelof for his cooperation and advice; Rummel Studios on behalf of their services; and to Mrs. Helen Sparks, our advisor, for her patience, understanding, and the many hours she spent directing us.
